SATURDAY EVENING, DEC. 2, 1882.
B. S. MUSKER,
GAMSHIER & MOSSER,
DRUGGISTS,
107 W. MADISON.
Entered at the Post-office at Decatur, Illinois, as second-class mail matter.

Col. JONATHAN MORRILL, the collector of U. S. internal revenue for the Springfield district, is mentioned in connection with the republican nomination for governor in 1884.

The Cleveland Leader thinks that if the Republicans are wise they will make no long speeches during the session of Congress that is to begin next Monday. They will present what bills are necessary, and push them to a vote as rapidly as possible, and adjourn. If the Democrats attempt to filibuster or to kill time by long speeches, gag them with the previous question. The next two years they can talk to their hearts' content.

Hon. J. T. Thompson, republican congressman elect from the seventh Ohio district, died on Thursday evening at his residence in Mount Pleasant, Jefferson county, O. His disease was stone in the bladder, and he had been treated for several months for Bright's disease before this was discovered. An operation was performed a few days ago. Dr. Updegraff was about 60 years old. He graduated at the University of Pennsylvania, studied medicine in Edinburgh and Paris, and served as a surgeon in the Union army. He was a member of the present congress, and was re-elected in October.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post gives the following account of an electric storm on the summit of Pike's Peak, 14,147 feet above the sea. For over two hours everything was tipped and covered with electricity. Spanish pack mules left on the summit by the night appeared to be all on fire, the clothes of the men seemed ablaze, electricity streaming from the tips of their fingers, from the nose and from the hair. The aneroidometer on top of the building spat fire at every revolution. Every rock on the summit was covered with flame.

The Republican majority in the House, none too large at best, is diminished by one through the death of Congressman Updegraff, of Ohio, or would be but for the fact that Representative McLean, of St. Louis, a Republican, will fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of a Democrat. Mr. Updegraff's demise also creates a vacancy in the new House, a full year in advance of its meeting. In the special election to be held for both terms there will be about even chances between the parties.

GENERAL BRIGHAM has taken to making programs. He says he never changes his politics, but sometimes changes his friends. That reminds us of the southern daddy who started to mill aristocratic mule noted for its fine baking qualities. After going a distance the perverse quadruped ceased to exercise his functions of travel, and Sandoe could by no means persuade him to go ahead. "I reckon you ain't going to move me now, is you?" asked Sandoe of the mule. But the mule said never a word.

"Don't use gwine to stretch myself along yo' back an' ketch a spee' sleep." By the time Sandoe had his arrangements made to get the better of the beast there was a sudden agitation of mercury, and he found himself in the corner of a fence with a great scattering of shelled corn about him. Reflectively pulling his chin, and looking down the road at a rapidly diminishing object, Sandoe remarked comprehensively, "Dad mule hit changed his mind."

Laws that much abused stay of fashionable femininity, the corset has at last found a defender. At eminent physician, Dr. Chadwick, writes to the Knowledge a spirited argument in support of the great supporter. So far from being the cause of consumption, dyspepsia, and emaciation of the spine it is, if rightly worn, a safeguard against those ills of female flesh, only it must not be tightly laced. But what the corn doctor of the stage would call drunk corsets are never worn. The lady is yet to be born who really lace. The only use of the corset is to help carry the burdensome wardrobe imposed upon woman by the fashion of the period. There is no compression or distortion about it if the wearer is to be believed. But Dr. Chadwick defends the corset on the broad ground that nature does not understand her business, or, as he puts it, seldom makes a good waist. It would be a sheer waste of time to discuss the standard of goodness in this matter. The Greeks had a standard which required no help from the stay maker, but the grander assise of modern taste demands a contraction of the waist and that settles it. The Diet Lewis who would hold the corset responsible for every malady of the sex may lift up their voices in vain lamentation over the fatal ravages of whalebone and strings. So long as the fat of fashion declares that "nature seldom makes a good waist," any crusade against unnatural and destructive living would be sanitary law.

"I would like to be excused, your honor," said a Chicago man who had been drawn on the jury. "What for?" "I owe a man $5, and I want to find him up and pay it." Do you mean to say you would hunt up a man to pay a bill instead of wait for him to hunt up you?" "Yes, sir." "You are excused. I don't want any man on this jury who will lie like that."—Philadelphia News.

Cured of Intemperance.

Men are cured of intemperance at an institution in New York known as the Christian Home for Intemperance. Men by a peculiar method. It seems that cures are effected by treating drunkenness as a sin, no intemperate man being received unless he expresses a desire to become a Christian. None are received for less than four weeks, and some stay as long as three months. No liquor is ever allowed for "tapering-off" as it is called, and yet contrary to the generally received opinion, no cases of delirium tremens, arising from a sudden deprivation of the accustomed stimulant, are reported. Warm milk with a little salt in it, beef tea, and, in exceptionally bad cases, bromide of potassium, are administered. Victims of the opium habit have been also cured, some of whom had taken as much as 250 grains per day. As baccas is excluded as rigorously as liquor. The patients have the use of a library and reading room, are expected to attend upon the large number of religious exercises which take place daily, and to sign a promise plodging themselves upon their honor not to use while in the house, or have in their possession liquor, opium, or tobacco. Amusements are not encouraged: inmates are expected to read, write, meditate, and pray. There is no physician, the idea being that if man desires to be saved he can be. There is a good deal in this belief, as all reformers know. The institution has 925 inmates in five years, of which number it claims to have reclaimed 60 per cent.

Anna Dickinson Reduced to Poverty.
New York Sun.

Anna Dickinson has withdrawn from the stage, and is living with her sister and aged mother at Honesdale, Pa. "She and her family," says a friendly writer in the Philadelphia Press, "are poor, but proud as ever. Anna has been importuned by her friends to return to the strain, but she will not listen to anything of the kind. The temperance people are especially anxious to enlist her services. Her disastrous theatrical career took her last dollar. She looks careworn and somewhat sad. Her large expressive eyes are eloquent as ever, but it is impossible not to feel, after a glance at her face, that disappointment has embittered her life. She had counted much on the success of her Hamlet, and studied hard to make it such, but finally became tired from the field, broken in health and financially ruined. What she will do next is a mystery."

Profit of Sorghum Culture.

The yield of cane grown on the Illinois Agricultural College farm in the past season was an average of over eleven tons per acre. The yield of orange juice was 50 per cent greater than that of sugar. The average yield of syrup was near seventeen gallons per ton of cane. Rating the value of the syrup at 50 cents per gallon, it will be seen that the crop is a most profitable one, averaging in this case nearly $100 per acre, to say nothing of the value of the bagasse for wrapping paper. The following item from an Eastern exchange of recent date shows what can be done with sorghum in the sandy soil of New Jersey: At Rio Grande, N. J., some six miles from Cape May, some gentlemen started a sorghum plantation of 1,000 acres last spring, and are now busily engaged in grinding the cane and making sugar. They have already sent to Philadelphia 100,000 pounds of excellent sugar, and confidently expect to produce this season at least 500,000 pounds, worth about $35,000, or some $35 an acre for a crop which has cost no more to cultivate than an ordinary crop of corn.

Christmas Gifting for Europe.

In the last six years the United States have been creditably represented in the annual Christmas cattle markets of London, and mainly through the enterprise of Mr. T. C. Eastman, of New York, and Mr. J. D. Gillett, of Elkhart, Ind. The steers Greek of the National Line sailed on Thursday with a note worthy cargo of live cattle, and the steers St. Romans next day took upwards of 300 fine steers. The cargo of the Greece includes eighty premium steers, 3 years old, whose average weight in Chicago last Saturday was 1,350 pounds; and eighty one premium steers, 2 years old, weighing 1,650 pounds average. All of these cattle are owned and were fed by Mr. J. D. Gillett. Some of them were awarded first and second prizes at the late Fat Stock Show in Chicago, and the herd, as a whole, was probably never before matched for quality, except by a lot of 130 head sent about three years ago by the same shipper to the same market.

Practical Benevolence.

An old story is being revived of a prayer meeting held for a poor old fellow who had broken his leg. While Deacon Brown was praying a tall fellow with an ox gond, knocked at the door saying, "Deacon, could not come but sent his prayers in the earl." They were potatoes, beef, pork, and corn. Country Journal.

The action of the leading New York banks in refusing to loan money on called United States bonds is pretty conclusive evidence that the money market has been manipulated by stock gamblers, and a hibernation secretly created by locking up currency. The obvious purpose is to depress the stock market. This would be of little consequence to the general public, did it not affect the interests of the country. As it is, the locking of money is a crime that could not be too severely punished.

"I would like to be excused, your honor," said a Chicago man who had been drawn on the jury. "What for?" "I owe a man $5, and I want to find him up and pay it." Do you mean to say you would hunt up a man to pay a bill instead of wait for him to hunt up you?" "Yes, sir." "You are excused. The Transit of Venus. December 6.

Professor Hackney, of the United States Transit of Venus Commission, requests the publication of the following:

There are many persons scattered over the country who have good telescopes, and would be glad to observe the contacts during the coming transit of Venus, December 6, if they had any means of obtaining Washington time. The Western Union Telegraph Company has most generously agreed to give wide distribution to noon-time signals from the Naval Observatory December 4, 5, 6 and 7. As the service will be wholly gratuitous on the part of the telegraph company, its officers request all persons who intend to make accurate observations of the transit to immediately notify the nearest Western Union telegraph office as the transmission of signals will involve the use of many thousands of miles of wire and the making up of many special circuits, all of which must be planned beforehand. Furnishing these signals free of cost to all observers is a contribution to science on the part of the Western Union Company which will be appreciated by every one interested in astronomy.

The Peoria Transcript transmits a critical contemporary by calling it a "tetragonal pragmatist," which indulges in "galimatias sciences." It also overhows it by referring to it as a "philanderer philomatist," and calls attention to "the miscibility of the derivation" of a word over which the critic stumbled. There are seven distilleries in Peoria.

Tin has been considerable gossip about the religious views of the late Thurber Weed. It seems that he made no formal profession of his religious faith, but the following words of his show that he had meditated about a future life: "It is a relief to me to repeat the Lord's Prayer before going to bed, and I could not sleep without it. I cannot believe, and cannot be brought to believe, that the purpose of one's existence here is to make the world a better place to live in." The temperance people are especially anxious to enlist her services. Her disastrous theatrical career took her last dollar. She looks careworn and somewhat sad. Her large expressive eyes are eloquent as ever, but it is impossible not to feel, after a glance at her face, that disappointment has embittered her life. She had counted much on the success of her Hamlet, and studied hard to make it such, but finally became tired from the field, broken in health and financially ruined. What she will do next is a mystery.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 1. Inquiry at the Executive Mansion to-day relative to the successor of Marshal Henry showed that the President was not disposed to make a nomination until Congress met. The person usually selected for this position has been one who sustained close relations with the President, and on occasions of ceremony at the White House the Marshal of the District of Columbia made the presentations to the Chief Magistrate. With the advent of Frederick Douglass, the plan was changed to a continuance for a continuance of the tax on others, among them token. He is in favor of reform and a material reduction in internal revenue taxation. He thinks the house bill passed last session should be amended so as to still further reduce the internal revenue from certain articles mentioned in the bill, and provide for the total abolition of the tax on whisky, although at a lower rate. The tariff question is very little discussed among republican members, and there seems to be very little disposition to tamper with it.
